

Submission Call for Online Feminist Collection

Resources for Feminist Research (RFR/DRF)* and the Centre for Women's Studies in Education (CWSE), University of Toronto are calling for submissions to an edited feminist collection.

The collection editors, Lorena M. Gajardo (RFR/DRF) and Jamie Ryckman (CWSE) are looking for submissions that address the question, “How did you become a feminist and how has feminism shaped your worldview?”

The idea is to bring together stories from feminists from a variety of backgrounds, ages and experiences. We encourage submissions from academics and non-academics, students, researchers, advocates, artists, authors and women from across Canada. If you think you have a story to tell about becoming a feminist, we encourage you to submit to this collection.

The collection will be published in PDF format and distributed online. A limited number of print copies will be made available upon request through CWSE.

Submitting

Submission format is open-ended. Essays, art, poetry are all acceptable.

Written submissions: no minimum word count, 1200 maximum word count. Please attach your submission in an email as a Word file (.doc or .docx).

Pictures: Minimum resolution 300dpi, jpeg format. No size minimums or maximums, but we reserve the right to shrink large images. Please attach images in your email with appropriate labels and include in your email the title of the art/series. If you submit more than one image, we reserve the right to select which images and how many we will publish.

Submissions deadline is midnight of Friday, April 2, 2010.

Email all submissions to Jamie Ryckman at cwse@utoronto.ca with the subject, “Feminist Collection Submission”. Please include the name you wish to be published under and a short biography of yourself (approximately a paragraph). You may also include your email or website if you wish for them to be published with your name.

We will acknowledge within a week that we have received your submission, and decisions will be made the first few weeks of April.
